

USEFUL WEBSITES FOR YOUR JOB SEARCH

January 2020

www.indeed.com and www.simplyhired.com are 2 powerful job listing sites with advanced search features that use spider technology to search jobs by your location and key words. Jobs are pulled from many other job boards.

www.craigslist.org - This website is especially useful for locating openings in small and midsize organizations, especially in the arts, writing & publishing, technical design and nonprofit areas.

www.linkedin.com – Specify areas of interest in the “Jobs” area and LinkedIn will deliver matching positions to your online profile www.facebook.com- Facebook now allows companies to post job ads via their profiles. You can apply through a form pre-populated from your profile.

www.careerbuilder.com – Search by location, job category, and/or keywords. Post your resume and create an account, save searches and have jobs sent to you www.glassdoor.com Job matching plus company reviews www.monster.com - You can look for jobs, create an account and upload a resume on this megasite.

www.sanfranjobs.com – Useful for local – especially San Francisco – jobs www.themuse.com – Explore and link to opportunities with selected companies www.idealists.org - Find jobs in the nonprofit sector by job function and zip code.

www.opportunityknocks.org – Find jobs in the nonprofit sector. Search by zip code for local jobs.

www.calcareers.ca.gov – This is the entry point for jobs working for the State of California www.wayup.com – a job search site for students and new grads www.guru.com & freelancer.com –Sites for those looking for freelance opportunities www.angel.co/jobs - A site for those wanting to work with a start-up www.cac.ca.gov - This site has some postings for those wanting to work in the arts www.caljobs.ca.gov State of California EDD job matching service with registration www.jobs2careers.com – Another option that lets you search by keyword, company or zipcode www.ziprecruiter.com - Useful for jobs from staffing agencies and some local employers www.localwise.com - This site specializes in local service and office jobs